Trace3 Executive Security Services is a team of industry professionals with deep security expertise. Our unique approach blends business, technology, and innovation to help tackle today's emerging security challenges. Striving to enable security leaders with next generation solutions focused on process improvements.

A security sprint solves complex business or technical problems in just five days. Subject matter experts (SME) from both the customer and Trace3 come together to rapidly analyze the current state and challenges related to the problem.

What do I get? Answers to your questions.

Is what I have good enough?
We'll explore your area of focus like the ones listed on the right. Within days you'll know what people, processes, and technologies are working and what needs to be fixed.

What risks do I have and what threats are in my industry?
We'll uncover risks based on current program weaknesses and environmental threats.

Why should something be done? Is it worth the expense?
Once gaps in the current process are identified, then you'll have your justification for purchases or process change.

What does an improved system look like? What tools do I need?
A prototype will be delivered that clearly identifies the proposed process and technology changes of the solution.
